

EMMAVILLE PRIMARY SCHOOL

WEEKLY NEWS BULLETIN

WORKING IN PARTNERSHIP WITH PARENTS

Are you responsible? Good at listening to others?
Care about this wonderful school?
If so, then you would make a fantastic school councillor.

If you would like to be a school councillor, you need to write a speech letting your classmates know why you think that you would be good for this role!

Voting to take place next week on Monday 9th October!

Good luck!

It is that time in the month when we share samples of children's writing on The Writer of the Month board. This means that I have had the pleasure of reading lots of lovely things produced by our very own Emmaville writers.

Congratulations to you all for being chosen by your teachers to have your work displayed on my board.

Unfortunately, we cannot include all of the children's work so please enjoy reading the pieces included.

The gingerbread FOX

Finally he came to a river.
clim on to my
tail my feet are getting wet.
clim on to my
head my hands are getting wet. clim
on to my nose my ears are getting
wet. snap The crocodile gobbled
him up.

Speedy Boy has a flamey mask. At breakfast time Speedy Boy is in the kitchen. Unfortunately the deadly paws tried to get the frozen stick.
Fortunately Speedy Boy
picked up the frozen stick in the fridge. Now it's the end of Speedy Boy's adventures well,
for today at least.

Marla had always been creative. Early one sunny afternoon, Marla was sat in her bright house. As Marla was sitting happily she was watching a video about athletics, when a light caught her eye. It was coming from a magic door. Gently, she lifted over to it and carefully turned the gold shiny handle. It led to an amazing jungle world. In the middle of the jungle Marla could see monkeys with blue eyes swinging through the trees, crocodiles with sharp teeth and lions with a crimson mane. In the distance Marla could see furry tigers, and more lions with a ruby mane and there was monkeys with bright yellow bananas. Everywhere she could see loads of parrots with a light yellow beak flying through the air. Marla tried to speak to some more monkeys but they didn't speak. In the middle of jungle Marla saw a glittering elephant stomping slowly through the river. She said "enjoy all the animals but don't touch plants with berries on".

A Big Splash

The clear blue sky above her danced with the clouds as the breeze sang in harmony with the chirping birds. The transparent waves in the pool shimmered like a thousand diamonds, more beautiful than the night sky, and the sun was jealous. The last glimpses of the sun rays settled on the pool and Anna realized how late it was, as the moonlight put her in a shimmering trance.

Suddenly, the rain came pouring down as Anna jumped into the inky blue water. The thunder slashed like a knife while the burning flames of the trees left spots in her eyes. The inky darkness of the pool grew higher and higher ...

To make matters worse the waves slammed her against the wall and broke the ribs on her right side! A small current of electricity shot through the now black waters. Over by the mouldy, rickety bridge a hundred yards away the whole town was being evacuated. In the back of her mind she saw the piercing red color of her mother's shawl. Everything went blurry and the last sound she heard was her own muffled scream.

Squabid, thin homeless people search in desperation among rust rigged train tracks for something, anything, to eat. Those unlucky enough to dwell in the cold, damp, jagged rails might get rust under their muddy fingernails and will be presented with an almost certain chance of death early.

A vicious murmur along columns of fellow homeless ones provide many worst-case scenarios. Elderly folk wither and die on cold, rough, sleeping bags. Paint chips off the walls as they get hit by bombs and mines. The smell of plastic contaminates the near-depleted oxygen. Forces of the police put on a brave face, but don't know when, or if, the war will end.

We have many budding authors at Emmaville and we always love to hear the stories, poems and songs the children have written. Charlotte in Wales class wrote and performed this seasonal poem to her class and it was so good, we wanted to share it with you.
