Dear Mother,

Today brought back so many memories; some happy and some difficult. When I was cleaning the theatre, it was him, my brother, who walked in. I hadn't seen him in so long and it brought back the painful memories of that fateful day.

It was a normal lesson. We were both at the piano and brother was playing the music exactly as teacher had wanted. He always followed the rules. I sat there, despondent, frustrated. I hated how she made us play that music. I hated how she paced the room back and forwards with her stick. Click, clack, click, clack. Back and forth. I just wanted to be free, have fun and play the music I loved. So I did. I gave brother a gentle nudge and played to my hearts content.
