

What was inside Fu Hao's Tomb?

Under the coffin in the grave was another smaller pit with the remains of six dogs that had been sacrificed for the burial.

Cut into the wall above the main chamber of the tomb were little shelves on which sixteen dead slaves had been placed after being sacrificed for the burial too.

Inside the tomb, 755 jade objects were found, including older objects from the Stone Age which she had probably collected.

Inside the tomb, 564 bone objects were found, including 500 hairpins and 20 arrowheads.

Inside the tomb, 468 bronze objects were found, including over 200 ritual bronze vessels, 130 weapons, 23 bells, 27 knives, 4 mirrors and 4 tiger statues.

Inside the tomb, 6,900 cowry shells were found. Cowry shells were used as currency during the Shang Dynasty.

